A & B Case at Empire.

The entire town of Empire was present yesterday at the trial of Constable Miller who swiped ex-County Commissioner Jones in the left eye a few days ago. The jury failed to agree and the case was reset for next Friday.

THE HARRISON EDGE.

A Political Emblem of 1840 Unearthed by Fairchild.

The Republican campaign colors for this year are red, white and blue—the national colors—and these are to be found on all the badges, flags, handkerchiefs, etc., affected by the members of the party.

Strange as it may seem, in 1840, when General Harrison, the grandfather of the present nominee, was a candidate for the Presidency, the party colors were the same, and were emblazoned on the badges of the time. A short time ago C. S. Fairchild, Secretary of the Treasury, discovered in the archives of his department a souvenir badge of the Harrison log-cabin and hard-cider campaign. In shape it was square, having in the center a white square, on which was painted a picture of the hero of Tippecanoe in military costume. Around the white square was another in blue and the outer edge alternated in red and white. In the center was the word "protection." The badges now being worn by the Republicans are round, but otherwise are substantially similar. Colonel J. P. Jackson of this city, says the San Francisco Call, is said to possess one of the original badges of 1840. The scheme of re-producing the old badges has been suggested to Col. Jackson, and it is probable he will loan his badge for the purpose.

Fair Play.

Gen. Alexander, in his speech to the Young Men's Republican Club last Saturday evening, gave some very sensible ideas on fair play and his remarks were applauded by the Democrats present.

The APPEAL hopes that the idea may characterize Ormsby politics this year. Nothing is gained by the abuse of candidates, and the APPEAL, as far as its columns are concerned, proposes to give fair play to every Democrat who chooses to run for office in Ormsby this Fall. A party in the majority can always afford to deal fairly with its political opponents, and there is no necessity for turning a town upside down to decide who shall fill the respective offices for the next two years.

Indian Depredation Claims.

Senator Stewart writes to C. S. Young and C. H. Stoddard, who are agents for the collection of Nevada Indian depredation claims, as follows: "I shall endeavor to get the bill passed by the Senate to pay the Piute war claims through the House at once. It will be a precedent for the remainder of our Nevada claims. I have received a certified copy of the depredation claims of the citizens of Humboldt and Lander counties, and will consider the best course to pursue in regard to having them properly passed upon." Senator Stewart is very sanguine that the claims will be allowed.

How to Camp.

The Stockton Mail is trying to read the Examiner out of the Democratic party for demanding a protective tariff on California raisins. The Examiner is for Cleveland, but it has the sense to see that California needs protection to her industries, and has the fairness to acknowledge that California raisins will bring better prices under the protecting wing of a Republican tariff.

But while the Examiner is advocating a tariff on California raisins, why should it attack the Pennsylvania journals which ask that the iron industry of their own State should receive equal consideration.

Death of Mrs. Todman.

Mrs. J. A. Todman, wife of Cap. Todman, of Lake Tahoe, died at Salt Lake City last Thursday night. She was an estimable woman, and fond wife and mother. It is reported that the remains will be interred at Carson, where she has long resided.—Truckee Republican.

Hay and Grain.

The hay crop is very short all over the State this year on account of the dry season, and the grain, on account of the timely Spring rains, will be very heavy. Despite all assertions to the contrary by the ranchers, it is the biggest grain crop ever harvested in this State.

La Belle Russe.

That Jeffreys-Lewis has made a strong bit was evident last night in the increased gathering which came out to see her La Belle Russe. The lower portion of the house and the first circle were fairly filled. As her methods are all of the most legitimate and her plays of high order of merit, with no clap-trap or mechanical sensations, the galleries were ghostly in their silence and desertion. Miss Lewis intensified the deep impression created by her "Forget me Not. The motive of the two plays is much the same, a scheming, notorious female intruder herself into a household, where she is entrenched, as she imagines, beyond the hope of removal, and a man with the secret of her past in his possession, undertakes to dislodge her.

In the one play it is fear which is played upon to accomplish that end; in the other it is a mother's affection for her child. As the adventuress, sure of her position, full of defiance for the man who would rob her of it, and finally as the mother, who acknowledges her defect and confesses all to save her child from knowing her past, Miss Lewis ran the gamut of the emotions and stirred the audience to enthusiasm so deep that they paid her the rare compliment of remaining after the final curtain and making her reappear. The most striking situation in the play is that where the adventuress poisons the drink of her enemy, but he perceives her act by means of the reflection from a mirror, and casually urges the woman's daughter to drink the wine prepared for him. Miss Lewis here was grand, and the burst with which she threw herself before the child when she would have taken the glass, and so confessed all her guilt, was the acme of powerful acting. She was admirably supported by Mr. Mainhall as Brand, and that gentleman shared some of the hearty calls. Mr. Thompson's Sir Phillip was fair; Miss Rosemon made a very sweet old lady, and the other characters were capably filled.—Salt Lake Herald.

Query.

"Mr. Examiner—Please stand up and answer this question:

Do you favor a high tariff on iron?"

"No. Why should the consumer dump his money into the pockets of the trusts?"

"If vast deposits of iron were to be discovered in California, would you then favor a tariff on iron?"

"Well—er you see 'er, that's quite a different matter.

"When the iron's discovered we'll talk further about it."

Content for Savage Control.

The San Francisco Report says: "Archie Borland, who has openly declared war upon the Jones-Levy party who control the mine, and who says that he will make a strong effort to take the management out of their hands at the annual meeting, which will be held July 19th." The same journal says that new ore discoveries are absolutely necessary to move the price of Comstock shares.

Timber Depredations in Eureka
